Minutarian

From DG Joyce Gunter

This week Gary and I celebrate our 8th wedding Anniversary – thanks, Rotary! As many of you know, we met during a Rotary Project Fair in Costa Rica. We owe our happiness to Rotary. Why do I say that? In Sunday's Tampa Bay Times, Emily Smith, author of the new book "The Power of Meaning", describes her research and claims that happiness actually comes from having meaning in your life. She spent five years interviewing hundreds of people, and based on that research, she states that meaning can be found in four ways: belonging, purpose, transcendence and story-

Essential Oils (EO) Heal

I thought I was well informed about the benefits of essential oils until attending a five-day summit on them and learned how little I really knew.

There is little published research on essential oils up 'til now, yet people routinely use them for healing and improving health. According to Eric Zielinski, MPH, use of oils can be traced back to biblical times; the Bible references them over 300 times, which has piqued the interests of today's scientists and medical experts. Currently there are a number of clinical studies taking place around the globe to evaluate/ substantiate their healing properties.

telling. Rotary gives me that sense of belonging, with friends who truly love and care about me. I do have a sense of purpose through work, but Rotary gives me an extraordinarily larger sense of purpose, and a feeling that I can change the world. Rotary gives me a sense of being part of something that is bigger than myself and allows me to transcend my own life. We are all the authors of our own story, and Rotary allows me to create my own story that makes me personally proud every day. Every time I see a fellow Rotarian, look them in the eye, and shake their hand or give them a hug, I get a wonderful feeling of happiness.

Thank you for being my friends and partners in Rotary!
